Over the weekend of November 15-17, pastors, rabbis, imams, and other clergy in congregations across Virginia will be raising up Creation care and climate change as part of their sermons at weekly services and through other learning programs.

Congregations will be inviting their communities to better care for Creation and work for environmental justice: at home, in our congregations, and in Richmond.

You are invited to participate in a way that best fits your community. This could include inviting a guest speaker, hosting a coffee hour discussion, or organizing a workshop.

Ready-to-use resources for raising up climate justice from the pulpit, including bulletin inserts and sermon helpers, in English and in Spanish, will be available.
