

“ The Earth, You have placed it
for all living creatures. ” — QURAN 55:10

Our faith traditions teach the sacred worth of every living being, and affirm our interdependence with each other and with our natural world. As our experience of a global pandemic has made so clear, and as the climate crisis reminds us, we belong to each other. Our destinies are intertwined. But too often, we have failed as a Commonwealth to ensure all of our neighbors have access to basic utilities, to clean air and water, and to transportation.

This fall, we're joining with congregations across Virginia in reflecting on this sacred truth: we are all connected, and are called to seek our collective well-being, together.

Our community is honoring our kinship with each other and all Creation by speaking out for the common good.

Today, we ask you to join with faith leaders and congregations across the Commonwealth to vote with climate justice in mind, and to call on our leaders to fight for policies that reflect our common destiny, and that ensure all Virginians have access to essential services, to clean water, and to transit.

To all those seeking and serving in elected office in Virginia:

I am part of _____, a congregation that cares for our neighbors and all Creation.

Serving the people of Virginia is both a great privilege and responsibility. Please know: our neighbors are already experiencing environmental injustices like higher asthma rates, as well as flooding and other devastating impacts of climate change.

As people of faith, conscience, and good will, we call upon you to prioritize climate and environmental justice and to commit to vote for robust investments and rapid implementation of climate goals that move Virginia towards a just, clean energy future.
